Alchemy² Offers Free Upgrades for Early Adopter Customers of D²L Lip Sync Error Correction Device

Ventura, CA, December 30, 2005 - Alchemy², a new company recently formed by several of the original members of the Audio Alchemy team announces a number of enhancements to its DDL(aka D²L) Digital Delay Line.

"Response to the D²L has been great, both from consumers and the press," advises Chief Alchemist Peter Madnick. "We're introducing a new 4 input version at the Consumer Electronics show next week called DDL4 and felt that we should make some of the included upgrades available in the existing 2 input D²L version. As we only recently began selling this product, at CEDIA in September, it seemed only fair to offer those customers that bought early units these upgrades for FREE."

DDL (aka D²L) Enhancements for 2006 (to be included in the free upgrade) include:

Circuitry -

- Front Panel IR sensor added
- IR Learning Capability - enables the D2L to learn and be controlled by the commands of any other IR remote control
- Monster ISF® Certification

Additional Accessories -

- IR Remote Control with Source Select, Delay -, Delay +
- Monster ISF® Video Calibration DVD

All units purchased from the products September introduction through December 2005 are eligible the free upgrades. Units sold after this date will automatically incorporate these updates. For more information, contact support@alchemy2.com or call 805.647.7875.
